

THE STEVEN AVERY CASE — SOLVED

Updated December 4, 2018

I have been following this case since viewing “Making A Murderer” on Netflix in January. After viewing it twice, I joined every Facebook group there was that was dedicated to the many aspects of the case. After reading hundreds of comments and theories expressed by many people on Facebook, it finally dawned on me that this case is actually very easy to understand. Like so many other mysteries of our time, it has simply been made complicated to obscure the simple truth.

Clue #1

The first significant event is the amazing discovery of Teresa Halbach’s RAV4 by Pamela Sturm and her daughter searching Avery’s property for less than 20 minutes on November 5, 2005. It was as if they walked right to it. Of course, being the only vehicle “hidden” with boards and twigs, it probably stuck right out like a lightning rod. A blind man probably could have spotted it.

There is just one problem, however.

It's the wrong color. It's blue, as all of the photos seem to confirm and as is also reported in the search warrant: <http://www.stevenaverycase.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/02/Nov-5-Search-Warrant-and-Affidavit-and-Return.pdf>.

Teresa Halbach's RAV4 is clearly described as "dark green" in the missing person flyer that was created by her family.

The picture on the flyer of Teresa Halbach's RAV4 (below) appears to be green/teal. Some say the picture of Teresa was photo shopped because her head is too far above the top of the RAV4 roof line. But this can obviously be explained by the photographer kneeling, resulting in the apparent discrepancy.

There is a question, too, about the angle of some of the shadows. Looking at the reflection of the light on the rear door, it is not clear whether one flash was used or whether no flash was used and maybe those are two headlights from another car. You can follow an interesting discussion on this subject on Facebook (you may have to join the Sikikey group to read and/or participate):

https://www.facebook.com/groups/828980377229446/861683967292420/?notif_t=like¬if_id=1461251393204447

This is the picture that was entered into evidence from the trial, which tends to show a more blueish tint to it and it is clasified under “Re-Scanned Evidence Photo’s from Stene Avery’s Trial”. Being in the copier and scanning business all of my life, I can attest to the fact that copying or scanning any color photo is NEVER 100% correct, even with the best of equipment:

<http://www.stevenaverycase.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/04/exhibit-005.jpg?fbclid=IwAR3WRle5VMi-j7AzXIEDQqziAcHI8AtBqTN8qYjUOBri9D7a55FLZLXUoA4>

So, what is the real color of Teresa Halbach’s RAV4?

The obvious discrepancy in color (both in the pictures and in the documentation presented below) seems to have gone right over everyone's head, including the defense attorneys. The color anomaly has been attributed to the lighting, the mystical color change of the "teal" color, the camera technology of the day, the reproduction process (copy of a copy, etc.), and of course the fact that our present day computers and smart phones may not reproduce all colors perfectly. So, how do we know what the colors really are? Maybe we need to go with the testimony of what others actually saw and recorded at the time.

Did the 1999 RAV4 come in blue, green and teal? Yes.

The invoice below shows that Teresa's RAV4, previously described by the state as "green" and by the Halbach family as "dark green," is really Mystic Teal Mica. Below is the vehicle description of her RAV4.

As "Mystic Teal Mica," it supposedly will "mystically" change color, depending on the lighting and angle of view. Perhaps it does. But it certainly doesn't turn Blue Pearl. You decide for yourself if the recovered RAV4 is really blue or teal. Then look at what was recorded by the manufacturer's invoice below and in the police search warrant and in the other documentation.

It should be noted that vehicle color descriptions are usually limited to the major colors only. "Teal" would most likely fall into the green rather than the blue major color category.

Well, what about the interior color? This collage shows the interior to be blue. Only blue pictures were entered as evidence — and none of the correct gray ones were.

But isn't the interior supposed to be gray, according to the dealer invoice?

This picture appears to be gray (with a blue body color to the left.)

Notice that the black rubber molding in the top gray picture (that seals the car and the door to eliminate wind noise and rain) is blue in the blue picture. Rubber mouldings are always black on all cars regardless of the interior or exterior color. Also notice that even in the gray interior picture, the exterior body color (visible at the bottom left) is still green/teal.

How can one be blue and the other gray? By adjusting the white balance on the camera. Or through photo shopping. Or by simply making the entire picture blue in any basic photo editing feature found on most computers. Or one picture was in fact the original and printed out, then scanned on a flatbed scanner resulting (on purpose or by accident) in the color change.

So, why was this done. And by whom?

We can only speculate that either it was an “accident,” or it was done on purpose to simply add confusion to an already confusing aspect of the case. A diversion, if you will.

As to who did it is anyone’s guess. Maybe the behind-the-scenes lab techs had a hand in it.

And once again, the defense never questions the obvious discrepancies.

Okay, you say, but what about the dashboard VIN plate. Doesn’t that confirm the correct vehicle?

You mean the “moved or tampered with” dashboard VIN plate? Sure, it’s the correct VIN plate. It was obviously “moved” from Teresa’s green/teal RAV4. I’m guessing that the VIN plate was “popped out” with a screw driver, with the end mounting rivets now either missing or distorted. Maybe they used double sided tape to remount it and it didn’t stick very well. Any trained law enforcement person would have spotted the discrepancy in a second, as they obviously did.

Q Oh, I'm sorry. Uh, uh, I jumped ahead. Did you come in possession of a flashlight?

A Yes. I couldn't read all the VIN numbers and I asked either Lieutenant Hermann or Sergeant Orth for a flashlight because I -- I thought that would help with glares and different -- the lighting conditions weren't the greatest to see, plus the VIN plate was moved or tampered with.

Q All right. Were you then able to identify this vehicle?

A Yes.

Q And whose vehicle was it?

A Um, all 17 numbers matched the VIN number of the vehicle that was registered to Teresa Halbach.

Q Now, while you were there, we've heard from other deputies that were on scene, but let me ask you,

Remiker testimony that upon inspecting the Rav4, he noticed that the VIN had been tampered with Okay, then how about the tires and wheels. Are they the same brand as Teresa Halbach's green/teal RAV4?

As a matter of fact, they are:

In fact, not only is brand the same, so are the balancing weights in relation to the mag wheel design. Note that the rust on the brake drum (left picture, behind the wheel,) but not on the picture on the right, could be attributable to the time difference of several years between when these pictures were taken, if it were the same vehicle. But they aren't the same vehicle.

And what does this prove?

The wheels and the dashboard VIN plate were swapped. It probably took them about 30 minutes to do it. And it was probably done in a garage, with both vehicles side by side. Maybe in a salvage yard garage? Who do we know that owns one of those (in competition with the Avery's and happens to be owned by someone high up in law enforcement)?

But wait. What about the other VIN numbers stamped on all vehicles in various other places?

Apparently no law enforcement investigators at the Avery salvage yard bothered to check those other locations. And whoever originally swapped it probably felt confident that no one would bother to check it at the crime lab, either. And why should they? Those other VIN plates are worth just about $36 million.

Amazingly, the defense attorneys never bothered to ask about them, either.

MOST COMMON LOCATION

Driver Side Interior Dash

1969 and newer cars will have the VIN on the drivers side dash viewable through the windshield.

- Additional Possibilities:
 - Trunk (under spare)
 - Driver Door Jam (open Door)
 - Back Wheel Well

Where is your VIN?

Here are some common suggestions, but not the only places that the VIN may appear. Consult your dealership or the vehicle manufacturer if you have problems locating your VIN.

Sample Vehicle Shown

Raise hood and look in front of engine

Stamped on Front End of Frame

You can see it by looking down between your front carb and your windshield washer unit. Most likely older cars.

VIN numbers do not reflect the interior or exterior color of the vehicle, only the identification number of the vehicle.

Below is the driver's side door sill color and model identification plate. The colors are coded.

Several people have pointed out what seems to be a dent on the front fender wheel flares of both Teresa's green/teal RAV4 and the recovered blue RAV4. This is actually not a dent, but is a molded indentation to coincide with the body line. Below is a black 1999 RAV4 with the same exact indentation in the front flare.

Okay, but certainly her DNA must be in the vehicle since she drove it for so many years. Right? You would think so. But there is none. She was obviously never in the blue RAV4. But strangely, they claim Steven Avery's DNA is there on the hood latch, along with suspicious samples of his blood near the ignition switch and Teresa Halbach's blood in the back of the RAV4. Check out these Google sites for discussions on her lack of DNA on the recovered blue RAV4 and the (single) key found in Steven Avery's bedroom (below):

<https://www.google.com/search?q=teresa+halbach+dna+not+on+RAV4+or+key&ie=utf-8&oe=utf-8>

Attorney Kathleen Zellner purchased a 1999 RAV4, similar to the recovered blue RAV4:

<http://lawnewz.com/high-profile/nbc-dateline-major-letdown>

Clue #2

The second significant event to happen is the bizarre discovery of the RAV4 key on Steven Avery's bedroom floor. Discovered on November 8 (or possibly the 7th), 2005, by Manitowoc County sheriff's officers. These officers had no business being on the property, which had been previously searched by other law enforcement personnel. They had been prohibited from being on the property so as to not "taint" the investigation. The one key was found in plain sight by them only, lying in plain sight on the floor. Of course, they had to jiggle the nightstand first in order for it to magically appear. Right.

The investigation is now tainted!

Daily used
Toyota key

Key found in Steve Avery's room

Note the lack of wear typically associated with a frequently used key

But wait. Who has only “one” key? Most people have many keys on their keychain. Including Teresa Halbach.

Well, certainly her DNA would show up on her (one) key, wouldn't it?

Oddly enough, not only is her DNA not found on the single key, but Steven Avery's DNA is.

But What Does The Death Certificate Say?

Surely that must shed some light on this alleged crime.

<http://www.stevenaverycase.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/02/Trial-Exhibit-16-Halbach-Death-Certificate.pdf>

Well, the Death Certificate seems to confuse the matter even further.

No body is found, yet an autopsy is performed? The cause of death is "undetermined," which is then crossed out. Yet, manner of death is checked, "homicide."

Read more here: <http://www.businessinsider.com/making-a-murderer-teresa-halbach-death-certificate-2016-3>

It should be noted that the bone identification, which was strangely never challenged by the defense, is bogus at best:

<https://www.google.com/search?q=teresa+halbach+bone+identification+bogus&ie=utf-8&oe=utf-8>

And why should we believe anything testified by the state concerning DNA? The entire state has a very vested interest in putting away Steven Avery — and his $36 million lawsuit.

What About All The Other Evidence?

What about the bones and the bonfire, and the magic bullet in the garage? Well, for that matter, where does the entire concept of Teresa Halbach's death and/or murder come from in the first place?

From law enforcement. From the very people who planted the single key and the blue RAV4. From the very people who coerced the obviously false confession from Brendan Dassey. If they could pull off planting false evidence and extracting a false confession, what reason is there to believe anything further that they claim? Their credibility has just gone to zero.

Read about how the coroner was barred from the crime scene and from examining the bones and whose testimony in court was squelched: <http://theinspiringdad.com/debra-kakatsch>

And then read about the curious lack of pictures of the bones:

<http://www.postcrescent.com/story/news/2016/06/28/absence-photos-mars-avery-investigation/86031274>

Read this article on the strange death of her relative Carmen Boutwell:

<https://thmurderevidence.wordpress.com/carmen-died-the-day-th-was-reported-missing/>

There is no proof that Teresa Halbach is dead. Continuing to discuss any other aspects of this case is simply an exercise in futility. This case is the ultimate conspiracy, involving local and state officials at every level.

There is no evidence of a murder. Therefore there is no crime. Steven Avery and Brendan Dassey are innocent. The Steven Avery case is therefore solved.

So, Where Is Teresa Halbach?

The following is based on pure speculation.

It should be noted that there are many peculiarities about the Halbach family in general. The strange delay in reporting her missing (even though she lives next door,) the seemingly premature timing of her funeral (wouldn't you really like to make sure your loved one is truly dead before holding a funeral service for them?), the apparent lack of grief (and/or of emotion during the search and when making announcements,) the strange connection with the ex-boyfriend, the relationship with other family members (one of which died of a mysterious drug overdose and whose body was [possibly not completely] cremated and was about Teresa's height and build and who possibly shared the same DNA through the general family blood line — <https://thmurderevidence.wordpress.com/carmen-died-the-day-th-was-reported-missing>), possible "club" affiliation, ties to law enforcement, and the ultimate — their failure to go public and say, "That's not Teresa's RAV4! Hers was green (teal)." And then there is the strange death of the father in Florida. We won't even go there.

Quite possibly, the Halbach family had ties to the Sheriff himself, who just happens to own the only competing auto salvage business to the Avery's. One that allegedly does $1.5 million a year in business. And one that would profit greatly from any loss of business at the Avery's due to the bad publicity of Steven Avery.

The above anomalies and the total lack of conclusive evidence of the death of Teresa Halbach are what lead me to suspect that she is probably alive and well. Somewhere.

When you look at what really happened in the original rape case, and then look at all the players in that scripted crime, you see much more than just a local crooked law enforcement. You see associated civilian people (the club?) with means. Means to relocate someone. Someone who perhaps was looking for a ticket out of town. Or someone who was coerced, bribed or threatened to move.

Or maybe she was simply offered relocation in the state's Witness Protection Program? You have a crooked state judicial system. You have crooked law enforcement. Both work hand in hand. What better way to eliminate someone (without murdering them) than to coerce them to accept relocation under the strict guidelines of the Witness Protection Program. And under the law, no attorney or investigator can legally expose any participants in the program. She is safe from exposure — even if she is discovered!

But where could she have gone?

Anywhere in the country. Or anywhere out of the country. Out of the country is less than a day's journey. Maybe she even took her own green/teal RAV4, which would be why they had to substitute another vehicle. Or maybe she abandoned that vehicle on the Highway 147 turnabout where her vehicle was last spotted (parked and presumably investigated by law enforcement, which would explain why Colborn called in the plates long before the blue RAV4 is planted)?

Maybe she then ended up in the local mental facility (see below,) drugged to the point of not being able to make rational decisions on her own. Or maybe she wasn't drugged but was just a special "guest" there until arrangements for her relocation could be made. The possibilities are endless.

File NumberTYPE OF ACTIVITY: Letter Received from Manitowoc Co. Clerk of CourtsDATE OF ACTIVITY: 04/27/06REPORTING OFFICER: Inv. Mark Wiegert

On 04/27/06, I (Inv. WIEGERT of the CALUMET COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT) received a letter from the MANITOWOC COUNTY CLERK OF COURTS OFFICE. It should be noted I previously had spoken with the Clerk of Courts on 04/25/06. They indicated they had received an anonymous letter and thought it should be brought to my attention. I requested that the Clerk of Courts send a copy of the letter to me.

The following is verbatim the letter, which was sent to the MANITOWOC COUNTY CLERK OF COURTS:

"Dear Sir:

Steven Avery never killed Teresa Halbach. She is a patient at Winnebago Mental Health Institute."

It is signed CAROL and underneath it says "I seen her."

A copy of this letter will be included with this report.

Investigation continues.

There is much more information to understand in this entire case. I have much of it covered in my original paper, Why No One Is Understanding The Steven Avery Case. But what I have presented here should be enough for people to come to an understanding that this case is a bogus crime and an obvious conspiracy.
